The program will see Rhinomed's platform used to develop a range of unique nasally delivered cannabinoid products targeting a wide range of significant and unmet clinical and consumer health needs in the U.S.

The companies believe that nasally delivered, dose-metered, targeted medical cannabis formulations open up a new pathway and opportunity across a range of indications for this class of medication within the pharmaceutical and over-the-counter consumer health/wellness settings.

Financials

Under the terms of the agreement Rhinomed will optimise its platform for delivery of cannabinoid formulations and supply the customised product to Columbia Care. Columbia Care will manufacture and place specific pharmaceutical formulations onto the platform in its facilities in the U.S.

Rhinomed will retain all intellectual property rights to its drug delivery platform. Any new intellectual property developed from the collaboration will be owned by the party responsible for the invention. Intellectual property invented jointly by Rhinomed and Columbia Care will be jointly owned by both parties.

The agreed revenue model will see Rhinomed receive cost plus a double-digit royalty fee on a per product basis.

In addition, Rhinomed will also receive a further double-digit share of net profits that varies based on the retail channel - with a greater share for product sold through its retail channels.

Rhinomed notes that while it is too early to assess whether the impact of this deal will affect its 2019 revenues the company has been steadily working to unlock shareholder value by strategically opening up new industry verticals such as drug delivery, following the widespread and successful distribution and adoption of its Mute nasal stent product.

Rhinomed's platform technology

Rhinomed's patented nasal technology platform has broad application across a range of markets. The platform is protected by a family of over 60 patents, granted and pending, plus further design patents, brand and trademarks.

Rhinomed has successfully commercialized two variants in sport and exercise (Turbine) and primary snoring and nasal obstruction (Mute). Mute has already achieved wide user adoption and retail distribution in over 9000 retail outlets in the US alone. Tens of thousands of people across three continents are already using Rhinomed technology to breathe and sleep better.

Rhinomed's unique nasal platform has broad application across a range of opportunities including nasal drug delivery and consumer health. The company's Mute technology is used by people around the world to help them to breathe more, snore less and sleep better.
